What does DOMA ruling mean to Pa.?

Landmark. The Supreme Court ruled that same-sex married couples deserve equal rights and benefits under federal law.

Pennsylvania advocates agree: Yesterday's U.S. Supreme Court ruling striking down the Defense of Marriage Act is one for the history books.

"This is an historic moment," Equality Forum director Malcolm Lazin said. "It may be quite literally the seminal moment in terms of LGBT civil rights."

State Rep. Brian Sims, the first openly gay man elected to the Pennsylvania legislature, said the decision "felt as important and epic as I expected it would."

"It's going to be the basis for every piece of legislation and litigation going forward from this point on," he said. "This is the Brown v. Board of Education for LGBT civil rights."

But many LGBT Pennsylvanians are wondering to what extent the law will immediately impact their lives. "I think, in truth, there will be very little immediate change with regard to the laws in Pennsylvania," Sims said. "Will people in Pennsylvania who are LGBT be able to get married tomorrow? Absolutely not."

By the numbers

States have legalized gay marriage

97
Million LGBT citizens who live in those states will be directly affected

1,138
Federal rights currently afforded to married couples will on July 1 extend to same-sex married couples in the states where they are legal.

Pennsylvania has its own law mandating marriages in the state must be between a man and a woman. "DOMA falling on a federal level does not affect the constitutionality of our 'mini-DOMA,'" said Angela Giampolo, chair of the Gay and Lesbian Lawyers of Philadelphia.

That means change could still be on the horizon — Giampolo said though additional state protections for LGBT rights could take up to seven years to achieve, legal challenges on a local level are one option through which progress might be more swiftly achieved.

"That's just literally getting a bunch of gay couples to go to City Hall, apply for a marriage license, get denied, sue and bring that to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court," she said. "Now that we have this opinion, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court would have to look to the U.S. Supreme Court and their ruling on this."

She said though such litigation wouldn't be a "slam dunk," and would require the support of large civil rights groups, "there's definitely momentum in Pennsylvania to make something like that happen."

Sims called the fight for LGBT rights "a civil rights battle," and said, like all civil rights battles, it has many fronts — from popular opinion and culture to legislation and litigation.

"I'm supportive of any efforts anybody in Pennsylvania wants to undertake to challenge the constitutionality of anti-marriage laws," he said. "Do I think that will be the undoing of those laws? I don't know. But it's more than spinning wheels."

Local consequences

What about Philly?

While Pennsylvania has few protections for LGBT rights — Lazin said the state is "literally akin to Alabama or Mississippi" — Philadelphia is much more progressive. The city has gender identity and sexual orientation nondiscrimination policies in employment, housing and accommodations, recently passed a bill extending trans-inclusive healthcare to city employees and recognizes life partnerships.

"It's basically the strongest thing we can have to validate and recognize same sex couples," the city Director of LGBT Affairs Gloria Casarez said. "It affords minimal benefits because there are very few things in the city's control. It's not marriage, and we can't step on the state's toes regarding marriage."

Casarez said she the ruling still leaves many questions unanswered. "It's a very difficult situation for folks to be in now," she said. "It is an established legal limbo for those couples who are legally married in other states, like myself, and before it didn't feel like quite as much of a legal limbo, but now that there are federal rights and protections that we may or may not get to cover us as well, it really does feel like a legal limbo."

Decision day

"We're overjoyed. I was crying this morning when I heard about it."
Arthur Martin-Chester, Civil union with husband Stevie on May 14, 1994

"I'm ecstatic. I feel vindicated, like I'm an actual person in the eyes of the government. I feel hopeful about the way things are going for securing equal rights for LGBT people."
Ricky Cintron

Ravens' Pierce robbed in Overbrook Park

Welcome home. The former Temple University running back also had his BMW stolen.

Running back for the 2013 Super Bowl champion Baltimore Ravens and Temple alumnus Bernard Pierce was robbed at gunpoint Sunday night in West Philadelphia, officials said.

A man leapt from another vehicle and held up Pierce, 23, and his unnamed cousin on the 7500 block of Haverford Avenue in Overbrook Park. Pierce forfeited his wallet, cellphone and keys, reports say.

The thief then carjacked his BMW X6 SUV, which was later found abandoned in a different area of the city.

Neither of the men involved were injured.

"We have been in contact with Bernard, and we are aware of the situation," the team said in a statement. Police said no suspects are in custody.

"Bernard's fine," his agent, Martin Magid, told The Baltimore Sun. "The police are investigating the incident. Any questions about it should be forwarded to the Philadelphia Police Department. It's not the best situation, but he's good."

Pierce, originally from Ardmore, ran for 33 yards on 12 carries in the Ravens' 34-31 Super Bowl XLVII victory over the San Francisco 49ers. As the primary backup to superstar Ray Rice, Pierce, who was a third-round pick in 2012, ran for 532 yards and one touchdown in his sophomore season.

Upper Darby bike cops nab couple having sex in park

Out in the open. A score of bicycle cops in training found an unpleasant surprise while riding along Garrett Road.

UPPER DARBY POLICE DEPARTMENT

Talk about doing the nasty.

As a crew of 25 cops underwent bicycle patrol training in Upper Darby Tuesday around 4 p.m., they happened upon a couple on a bench at Naylor's Run Park.

"The woman is bent over, no pants on," said Michael Chitwood, Upper Darby Police Department superintendent. "And the guy is standing behind her, and he's jamming her away."

The Upper Darby Police Department, once a year, schools and certifies officers from surrounding areas on how to patrol on a bicycle. Classroom work is the first day, but the remaining four days are spent in the streets of the West Philly suburb.

Lucky for them, class on Tuesday wasn't boring.

The pack of officers rode up on Richard McBride, 37, of North Philadelphia, and Jennifer Harvey, 41, of Clifton Heights, N.J., getting down on the first-base side of a softball diamond.

"The guys on the bikes were just as shocked as the two people who were involved in this sexual activity," Chitwood said.

Not that there's anything wrong with that, Chitwood added, "And, you know, nobody's a prude — who can't have sex in a park — but at 4 o'clock in the afternoon?"

The lovebirds were charged with open lewdness and disorderly conduct.

Quoted

"But, you know, it gets me mad. The guy is from Philadelphia, he can use all of Fairmount Park for God's sakes."

Supreme Court delivers wins for nation's marriage equality

Gay rights.
Same-sex marriage stirs cultural, religious and political passions.

The U.S. Supreme Court delivered a landmark victory for gay rights yesterday by forcing the federal government to recognize same-sex marriage in states where it is legal and paving the way for it in California.

As expected, however, the court fell short of a broader ruling endorsing a fundamental right for gay people to marry, meaning that there will be no impact in the more than 30 states that do not recognize gay marriage.

The cases, both decided on 5-4 votes, concerned the constitutionality of a key part of a federal law, the 1996 Defense of Marriage Act, that denied benefits to same-sex married couples, and a voter-approved California state law enacted in 2008, called Proposition 8, that banned gay marriage.

The court struck down Section 3 of DOMA, which limited the definition of marriage as between a man and a woman for the purposes of federal benefits, as a violation of the Constitution's guarantee of equal protection under the law.

Justice Anthony Kennedy, 76, appointed to the court by Republican President Ronald Reagan in 1988, was the key vote and wrote the DOMA opinion, the third major gay rights ruling he has authored since 1996.

In a separate opinion, the court ducked a decision on Proposition 8 by finding that supporters of the California law did not have standing to appeal a federal district court ruling that struck it down. REUTERS

Obama applauds Supreme Court decision

President Barack Obama applauded a Supreme Court decision yesterday that made married gay men and women eligible for federal benefits, and he directed Attorney General Eric Holder to review all relevant federal laws to ensure the ruling is implemented.

"The laws of our land are catching up to the fundamental truth that millions of Americans hold in our hearts: When all Americans are treated as equal, no matter who they are or whom they love, we are all more free," Obama said.

Obama got the news of the court's decision as he flew aboard Air Force One to start a weeklong trip to Senegal, South Africa and Tanzania. REUTERS

Phone witness describes Martin's last movements

Shooting. The identity of Trayvon Martin's friend, with whom he was speaking when he was shot, was revealed yesterday.

In the minutes before he died, Trayvon Martin told a friend with whom he was speaking by phone that a "creepy" man was "watching him," jurors in the murder trial of neighborhood watchman George Zimmerman heard yesterday.

Rachel Jeantel, 19, whose identity had been a closely guarded secret until her appearance in court, testified that she had spent several minutes on the phone listening to the unarmed black teen describe his efforts to get away from Zimmerman, until the line suddenly went dead.

Jeantel said Martin, then 17, "kept complaining that the man was looking at him," as he walked back to the house where he was staying with his father in the central Florida town of Sanford.

Zimmerman, 29 and part Hispanic, was a neighborhood watch volunteer in The Retreat at Twin Lakes community in Sanford at the time of the Feb. 26, 2012, killing. He has pleaded not guilty to second-degree murder and could face life imprisonment if convicted. REUTERS

Calls as evidence

Yesterday, jurors listened to five phone calls made between August 2011 and February 2012 where Zimmerman described "suspicious" black men in the neighborhood.

Patrol. Senate backs border amendment to immigration bill

The Senate overwhelmingly approved a $46 billion plan to increase federal law enforcement efforts at the U.S. border with Mexico, a move aimed at winning bipartisan passage this week of a comprehensive immigration bill. The amendment approved by the Senate aims to double, to around 40,000, the number of U.S. agents patrolling the Southwestern border; complete the construction of 700 miles of border fence; and enable the purchase of high-tech surveillance and other equipment to detect illegal border crossings.

The Senate backed the border security amendment by a vote of 69-29, with 15 of 46 Republicans joining all 52 Democrats and two independents. REUTERS

Marathon speech helps Democrats block Texas abortion bill

A marathon speech by a Texas Democrat temporarily frustrated a Republican drive for new state abortion restrictions, but political sources predicted yesterday that anti-abortion Gov. Rick Perry would quickly revive the proposal.

Sen. Wendy Davis, a single mother by the age of 19, drew attention when she spoke for more than 10 hours to block a measure that would ban abortions after 20 weeks of pregnancy. REUTERS

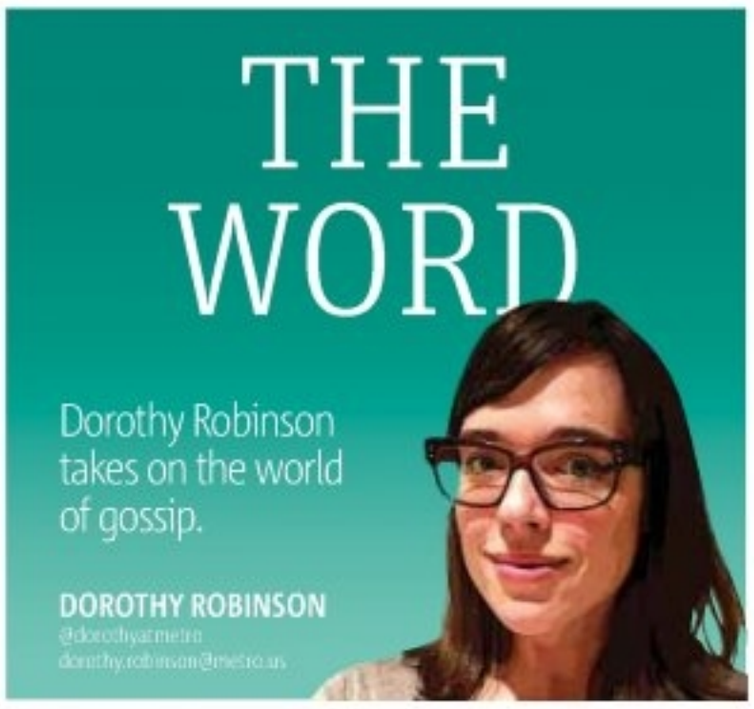
"What people do in their own homes is their business, and you can choose to love whoever you love. That's their business. It's no different than discriminating against blacks. It's discrimination, plain and simple."

Jay-Z to CNN



"I think that it is a good time for those who voted for the ban against gay marriage to sit and reflect and anticipate their great shame and the shame in their grandchildren's eyes if they continue that way of support. We've got to have equal rights for everyone!"

Sean Penn in his Oscar acceptance speech for "Milk"

"At some point in our lifetime, gay marriage won't be an issue, and everyone who stood against this civil right will look as outdated as George Wallace standing on the school steps keeping James Hood from entering the University of Alabama because he was black."

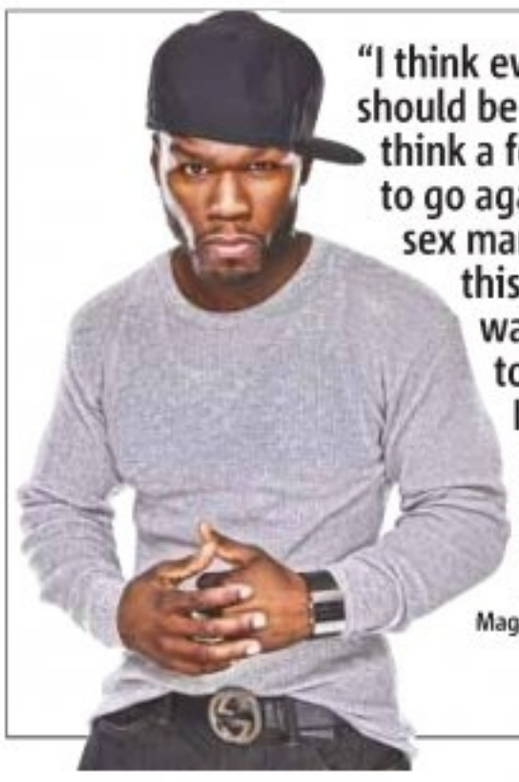
George Clooney to E!

"As a Baptist minister, I don't have the right to impose my views on anyone else. If committed gay and lesbian couples want to marry, that is their business; none of us should stand in their way."

Al Sharpton, in a self-produced video

"I understand not everybody is for gay marriage. But if you're not for gay marriage, don't marry a gay person. That's what I say."

Whoopi Goldberg in a video for Fight Back PAC



"I think everyone should be happy. I think a fool is going to go against same sex marriage at this point ... I want people to be happy. It makes for everything to be better."

DARLENE LOVE

The Rock and Roll Hall of Fame singer talks about doing backup for Phil Spector and the new documentary "Twenty Feet from Stardom."

SHE'S A REBEL

Darlene Love may not be a household name, but you'd know her if you heard her. As a member of The Blossoms, she recorded background vocals for many key Phil Spector songs in the '60s. Spector even put her front and center on "He's a Rebel" and "He's Sure the Boy I Love," but credited The Crystals. The new documentary "Twenty Feet From Stardom" highlights those like her who made a living singing backup. Today, Love, boisterous even in her 70s, enjoys a solo career singing her old songs. In 2010, she was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame.

Phil Spector wouldn't tell people that you and The Blossoms were black. What was the reaction when the public found out?
Most disc jockeys knew. As far as the public, they didn't know what color we were. They didn't care. They just loved the sound.

What was Spector like early on?
Actually, he was a great guy when we first met him! He was very calm and hadn't lost it yet. [Laughs] He came from New York to California, and the musicians were already great in their own right. He came to us kind of humble. He always had on a suit and tie. And we thought that was weird because nobody came to a session dressed up. He was very short, so he used to wear those Spanish shoes with the big heels that the English people wore in the '60s. It was a real heel, like the ones that matadors wear.

With background singers, is there more camaraderie than competition?
It's like a sisterhood. We were always happy

Why didn't Spector always give you credit?

He had recorded with The Crystals, but he didn't want that same sound. He used their name because they already had a thing going on. It was easier to break a record with them than with me.

when someone made it, because most background singers do not aspire to be solo artists. The one that sticks out the most was Luther Vandross, because he became a superstar. I don't even think Luther started out wanting to be a solo artist. He loved being a background singer. It was part of our lives to create. That's what we were doing; we were creating different sounds. Producers were depending on different background singers. They'd put the song on, and it was just a bare record. They'd ask us, "What do you hear here? Should we do something here?" We were creating, and no one really understands that until they see this movie.

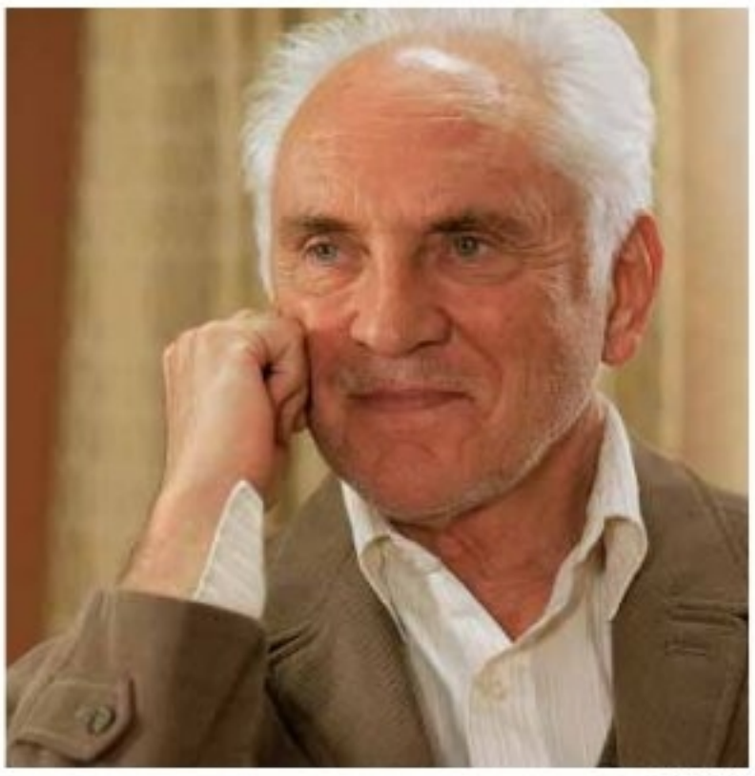
Kneel before Zod

Interview. Legend Terence Stamp talks about his new film, "Unfinished Song," as well as "Man of Steel."



NICK WALL

British actor Terence Stamp has just about perfected cranky, from playing General Zod in "Superman 2" to his roles in "The Adventures of Priscilla, Queen of the Desert" and "The Limey." In his latest, "Unfinished Song," he puts all that practice to good use playing the misanthropic but devoted husband of the sunny and terminally ill Marion (Vanessa Redgrave).

How easy does it make your job when Vanessa Redgrave is playing your wife?
It's not easy — it's just a great blessing, really. A lot of people have remarked that the fact that we're this couple who've been together for 30 years is just kind of a given. It's not spoken about, you know?

Also, having you and Christopher Eccleston play father and son is inspired casting.
When he was cast, my question to the director was, "How's his voice?" — meaning, "What's his dialect?" Because in England, your dialect is a kind of class system. It's really how you speak. Apparently, what he did was he downloaded both of my "Desert Island Discs" episodes, and he listened to my voice — which is so astute. Because it's not me performing, it's me being myself talking about the music that I like. So when he rucked up on the set, he had my voice down pat.

In an interview last year, director Terence Davies complained about how young English actors are all trying to sound like they're from South London nowadays.
That's funny, because that was what I had to lose. I thought, "I'm never going to be able to play Hamlet, I'm never going to be able to play Macbeth talking like that." I'm always amazed by the workings of the universe.

What do you think of "Man of Steel," wherein Michael Shannon takes over for your villainous character, General Zod?
I'm kind of sad. But to be honest with you, I think Dick Donner's Superman movies were the benchmark, really. I mean, every kind of comic-book movie of that genre took from those first two Superman movies, you know? So I would be very surprised if it was as funny and as sophisticated.

10 Films out right now

1 'White House Down' A would-be secret service agent (Gerard Butler) has to save the president (Aaron Eckhart) when he's captured by terrorists. Wait, sorry, that was "Olympus Has Fallen," the other "Die Hard in the White House" movie, from March. This one stars Channing Tatum and Jamie Foxx and is a bit more dumb.

Channing Tatum strips down to his tank top in "White House Down."
REINER BAJO

2 'The Heat' Sandra Bullock tries her hand at improv-heavy comedy stylings as a fed who teams up with detective Melissa McCarthy to take down a drug ring. Enjoy this, as it's the only major release this summer headlined by women.

3 'Twenty Feet From Stardom' The underheralded likes of Darlene Love and Merry Clayton finally get their documentary due in this profile of background singers.

4 'Byzantium' Neil Jordan returns to the "Interview with the Vampire" genre with this offbeat bloodsucker saga, starring Gemma Arterton and Saoirse Ronan as immortal mother and daughter, trying to fend off mean men.

5 'Hannah Arendt' New Yorkers went crazy over this biopic, starring Barbara Sukowa as the WWII-era German-American political theorist who coined the phrase "the banality of evil." Will it also play endless sell-out shows in your city?

6 'Unfinished Song' Remember that gruesome documentary "Young@Heart," about old people singing contemporary pop hits? This is the fiction version, only with grouchy Terrence Stamp terrifying everyone, including nice conductor Gemma Arterton.

7 'The Attack' Ziad Doueiri, who cut his teeth working for Tarantino, tells of an assimilated Arab in Tel Aviv who discovers his wife may have been involved in a recent suicide bombing.

8 'World War Z' A PG-13 zombie movie that underwent massive re-shoots and is directed by the guy who made the only boring Bond movie ever? Best of luck with that.

9 'Monsters University' Once upon a time, "Monsters, Inc." was the worst Pixar movie, due to it only being really incredibly wonderful instead of insanely, amazingly wonderful. Now we'll just take one that at least doesn't feature Larry the Cable Guy.

10 'The Bling Ring' A filmmaker (in)famous for work sympathetic toward bored richies focuses instead on those who aspire to be them, tackling the true story of teens who stole from the likes of Paris Hilton and Orlando Bloom. Emma Watson co-stars.

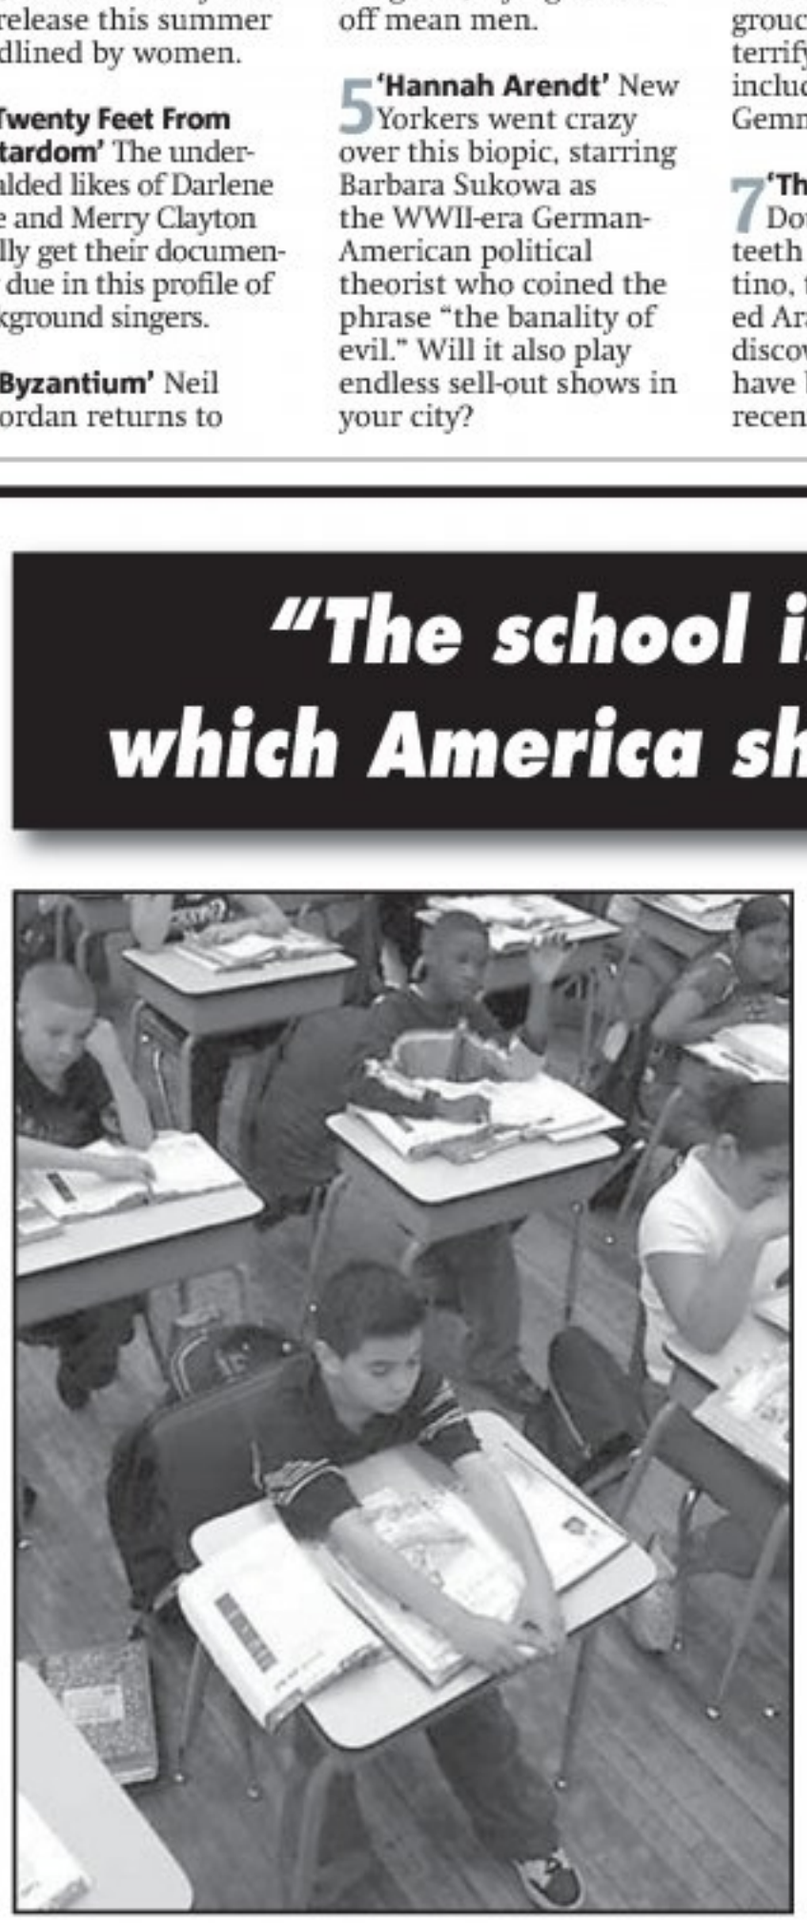
"The school is the last expenditure upon which America should be willing to economize."

– Franklin D. Roosevelt



Every election season, the politicians cynically re-discover the subject of education. "Our children are our most valuable resource," they say. "They are our future."

But, then, the funding of education takes a back seat to politics, big business and big money.

Twelve years ago the state took over control of the city school system but not the responsibility for it. They've gotten it all wrong.

But, there's still time to get it right. It's not too late to fix the problem – a statewide funding problem. But we all have to band together and demand that the politicians keep their promise.

Call them today. Tell the politicians to send a budget to the Governor's desk with the right priorities – that funds public education and puts our children first. Not just because it is the law, but because it is the right thing to do.

It has been said that a politician thinks of the next election. A statesman, of the next generation.

We'll all remember who did the right thing – those who choose educating our kids over politics.

'Love Has Come' for Steve Martin

Music. The comedian teamed up with singer Edie Brickell for a new album.

Steve Martin can get a little carried away when he's talking about banjo music. On the phone from Telluride, Colo., last week, he stopped to apologize after one digression. "I strayed from the question," Martin said. "I hope I'm not punished."

A scolding isn't likely to come from Edie Brickell, who listened patiently on the line as Martin waxed rhapsodically about his instrument of choice. The two are currently touring together in support of their new album, "Love Has Come For You." The unlikely duo met at the 70th birthday party for Paul Simon, Brickell's husband and Martin's longtime friend.

"We were off talking, and I got the opportunity to tell Steve how much I like his music," Brickell recalled. "I was just blown away that he can do what he can do, and said if he'd ever like to write a song together, it's my favorite thing to do. I was amazed when 10 days or so later, he actually called to say, 'OK, let's do it.' I had an easy time writing to his tunes, and I was lucky that he kept sending them to me, because it inspired a song every time."

The album is a departure for both artists — more of a traditional folk album than Martin's previous Grammy-winning excursions into bluegrass or Brickell's pop success with her band the New Bohemians. "If there's anything unusual about this record," Martin said, "it's that the banjo and voice are leading the way. Usually in bluegrass, the banjo is a driving force, but it's an instrument to use on the instrumental breaks. Here, it's actually echoing the emotion of the voice in a weird, melancholy way."

Steve Martin and Edie Brickell are on tour for their new album, "Love Has Come For You." / PROVIDED

Music has overtaken movies as Martin's vehicle of choice in recent years, in part due to the fact that, at 67, he's recently become a father for the first time. "The movie business changed quite a bit," he said. "I don't want to go away for three months to a foreign land, which is what you have to do now to make a movie. And with a wife and a child, I don't really want to go somewhere for a long time and work 14-hour days. The music was a complete accident."

While their live show features a healthy blend of music and comedy, the album itself is completely serious, with Brickell spinning captivating, folksy yarns over Martin's simple but memorable melodies. The lyrics grew naturally from Martin's music, Brickell said. "I just started singing how the banjo made me feel. If I hear any instrument play, I just to start to sing, because there's always a song; there are always images and feelings that music inspires. It's a complete mystery that engages me heart and soul."

Sexting study

Not just for teens

Young people aren't the only ones sending photos of their naughty bits on their phones. The market research film Harris Interactive recently published a survey that showed that an average of 26 percent of adults use their smartphones to spice things up. Mom and dad are in on it, too — one in five parents of children under the age of 18 said they had used their cellphones to sext. Sexty fun for all! MASHABLE

KEEP IT SEXTY, BUT FOLLOW THE RULES

Something I hear all too often from men and women alike is that overly sexual text messages turned them off from once-promising partners. Things had been going fine, but the texts got too sexty too fast — then it not only got awkward, but kinda creepy. To keep you from making this mistake, here are three simple rules to keep your texting in line.

Rule No. 1

Face to face

If you have not met a person in real life, don't sext them. Understandably, you want to be flirty if you're messaging someone from a dating site. But getting sexual in your messages is way too presumptuous for someone you haven't met in person and you're not even sure you're attracted to. (More importantly, they may not be sure if they're attracted to you!) Some playful teasing is fine, but save the "I wanna do blank to your blank" talk for a person you're actually dating.

Rule No. 2

Do it first

If you haven't done it in real life, don't text about it. So, you went on a few dates and made out a little bit — awesome. That doesn't give you the right to start texting about how you can't wait to get them naked or bend them over various pieces of furniture. The time to propose sexual activity is in person, not via cellphone. It's presumptuous to share your sex fantasies with someone who may not want to be having sex with you. Save the explicit talk and fantasies for when you're actually in a sexual relationship.

Rule No. 3

Cage your snake, boys

Function under the assumption that she doesn't want a dick pic. Guys: Your junk is impressive, I'm sure. But we don't want a picture of it. Really. We don't care how big, pierced, tattooed, well-groomed or whatever it is. Penises on their own aren't everybody's idea of sexy. Penises attached to guys we don't know that well also are definitely not sexy. If you're super fit and you want to send a topless pic, that's a little braggy, though at least it's hot. But keep your snake in its cage!

Gender benders

Lace, sheer tops, peekaboo cutouts and drapery — lately, menswear has taken a more feminine turn. We round up four standout looks from the men's shows that women could easily wear. RICHARD PECKETT

You know you want this top. / MICHELLE BOBB-PARRIS

1 Shaun Samson

A flash of flesh is always sexy, but a bare torso is positively titillating — and Samson did just that and more. The models came out in high boxers under low-slung shorts teamed with undone semi-sheer candy pink shirts.

2 Astrid Andersen

Yeah, meatheads can be campy, too. Andersen's gym bunnies came out with sweat-glistening abs in lace-detailed body stockings, crop tops, fitted trunks and even "meggings."

3 Kay Kwok

Playing with gender conventions is a great way of getting attention. Just ask new kid on the block Kay Kwok. He rolled with galaxy-style prints (it worked for Christopher Kane, after all) on slim-cut tailoring and, yes, tunics.

4 J.W. Anderson

Sheer tank top or floral halter-neck, anyone? In Anderson's world, we should all be dressing off the same rails — no time for gender stereotypes. Not a bad marketing ploy, after all — he has female editors cooing and lusting after the collection to the same extent as the men.

Where to eat this summer

The Philly restauranteurs we already know and love are opening new spots all over the city. JULIE SHANNON

IndeBlue

If the name sounds familiar, it's because the original IndeBlue has made quite a splash just over the bridge in Collingswood since opening in 2009. Chef Rakesh Ramola and his wife, Heather, just opened the Center City location, which serves up a mix of modern and traditional Indian food. The restaurant, currently only serving dinner, will debut brunch this weekend, and lunch next week.
205 S. 13th St.
215-545-4633
www.indeblue restaurant.com

Serpico

Stephen Starr has done it again, this time on South Street and in cahoots with chef Peter Serpico from New York City's Momofuku. This modern, Asian-influenced restaurant has been the talk of the town for a good while now, and early on — it opened Friday — the food is living up to expectations. Expand your horizons with deep fried duck leg and Wagyu chuck flap.
604 South St.
215-925-3001
www.serpicoonsouth.com

Barren Hill Tavern & Brewery

If you're a craft beer enthusiast, take a short trek outside Philly to Barren Hill Tavern & Brewery. Devil's Den and Old Eagle Tavern's owner Erin Wallace is turning the historic property, formerly the General Lafayette Inn, into a pub with 30 craft beers on draft and a selection of house-made brews.
646 Germantown Pike, Lafayette Hill
610-941-0600

Pizzeria Vetri

Marc Vetri must agree with us that there can never be enough pizza joints in the city. The man behind Amis, Alla Spina, Osteria and, of course, Vetri is opening a no-frills pizzeria later this summer. Expect a simple menu of wood-fired pizzas, similar to the pies at Osteria, plus salads and beer. If you're as impatient for it to open as we are, don't check out chef Brad Spence's Instagram account to drool over the pizza-testing pictures he puts up almost daily. It'll just make the wait that much harder.
1939 Callowhill St.

Kermit's Bake Shoppe

Pizza plus sticky buns equals a match made in heaven, at least according to Adam Ritter, owner of Graduate Hospital staple Sidecar, operating manger of Fishtown hot spot Kraftwork, and now owner at the soon-to-open Kermit's, a bakery/pizza shop packed with goodies from chef Chad Durkin.

But plan to grab your grub and go because the new spot, which should have a soft opening early next month, will only offer takeout and delivery.
2204 Washington Ave.

Talula's Daily

Aimee Olexy of Talula's Garden is in the process of taking over more of Washington Square with Talula's Daily. The new spot will be more of a market, carrying locally made pantry staples, artisan vinegars and oils, sandwiches and take-home dinners. But at 7 p.m., diners can dig into a four-course meal for $50 and nibble off the roaming cheese cart. The opening is slated for July 14, but reservations can be booked 60 days out — so get on it.

Our insider guide to seasonal menus, specials and a new slice

For so many restaurants, this sunny season is a slow point. People are on vacation, at the beach and escaping to distant relatives' homes, so long as they have a pool. Take advantage of the dining lull by devouring seasonal menus at spots that are usually packed, gone-too-soon specials and quickie meals.

SliCe is serving up a pistachio pie / KORY AVERSA

Seasonal menus

Tip: Seasonal is always in style, at least lately. It isn't difficult to find a restaurant that dabbles in seasonal dishes, but your best bet is to head to the places that have mastered entire menus based around the changing months.

Try it at: Pumpkin
It's a market and a restaurant, which means the folks there stand by the products and produce they use. If you're running in to grab takeout. The options include fresh Banh Mi, Greek salad and yogurt parfait. But you'll want to hit up this BYOB for dinner. This month you'll find swordfish, veal tongue and cauliflower Veloute with elephant garlic. (1713 South St., 215-545-4448, www.pumpkinphilly.com)

Special items

Tip: In addition to taking advantage of summer-ripe ingredients (like the ubiquitous tomato in July), chefs tend to use the season to play around with new ideas and test them out on willing diners. Some dishes become so popular they find a place on the menu permanently. Often times they don't, though, so make sure you sample what's temporary.

Try it at: SliCE
Starting in July, this gourmet pizza joint will have "the slice of the month" at all three locations. First at bat is the pistachio pizza. Rethink what you know about pies with this complex recipe of olive oil, ricotta and mozzarella cheeses, arugula, tomato, white truffle oil and of course, pistachios. You may never go back to pepperoni. (1180 S. 10th St., 215-463-0868; 1740 Sansom St., 215-557-9299; 4249 Ridge Ave., 215-843-4747, www.slicepa.com)

Sassafras Bar
The Old City staple is giving us the chance to — say it with us now — put some South in your mouth. Don't sleep on the already buzzed-about fried chicken po' boy sandwich that they have on special right now. Who said comfort food was reserved for the winter months? (48 S. Second St., 215-925-2317, www.sassafrasbar.com)

Serrano
Just up the street from Sassafras is Serrano, a joint that usually closes its doors for three weeks in the summer. Not this year. Instead, the restaurant will dedicate Thursdays, Fridays, and Saturdays in July to their casual "Street Fare." The kitchen will be preparing inexpensive, street-style food, plus refreshing sangria, with occasional live entertainment. You get all the glories of a street fair, only with more air conditioning and no sunburn. (20 S. Second St., 215-928-0770, www.serranophilly.com)

Eating out

Three more tips

- When it comes to pricier joints, opt for lunch instead of dinner. You'll still get a great meal, but your wallet won't be left empty.
- While everyone is out of town, make a reservation at that place that normally has a three-month waiting list.
- It's food truck season, so your favorites are likely roaming around.

Summer deals

Tip: Keep your ear to the ground and you'll learn that there are many tempting discounts that are meant to entice diners.
Try it at: Lolita's
Before they close for renovations in early August, this Midtown Village standby will be serving up early week specials. On Sundays bring your favorite tequila, purchase a pitcher of house-made margarita mix and the second pitcher is free. Come back on Mondays for plates of family-style barbecue, and then again on Tuesdays for tacos. (106 S. 13th St., 215-546-7100, www.lolitabyob.com)

Dinner and a movie, outside

Drive in. Moore is combining two of our favorite things: films and food trucks.

Moore College of Art and Design is giving us all a chance to get seriously local. With the new Film al Fresco series, the school entices Philadelphians with two of the things we love most: movies and food. And not just any old flick and fare, either. The emphasis is on local, independent and well-crafted pieces.

Each Friday in June and July (excluding July 5), the college welcomes everyone to sprawl out at Aviator Park and watch screenings of films created by some of Philadelphia's finest artists. This week, you can feel like you're a grown-up doing kid things.

One of the films to be screened on June 28 is "Suffering Heroes" by Kara Crombie. Her animated movies are no stranger to the Philadelphia art world, with previous showings at Vox Populi and Rowan University Art Gallery. These cartoon flicks aren't necessarily for kids, though.

"'Suffering Heroes' is the sixth installment in an animated series called 'Aloof Hills,' which revolves around the adventures of characters on a Civil War-era plantation," explains Crombie. "This episode focuses on a musically gifted slave named Alphabet Soup who is forced to perform for a camp of Union soldiers. To me it is an updated version of the story of Job."

To go with all this grown-up animation are food trucks, which will serve adult versions of childhood favorites. It's your chance to double down on local flavors.

The Lil' Pop Shop truck will be there, so instead of sucking the dyed slushy sugar out of a plastic freeze-pop casing, enjoy a thoughtfully crafted Popsicle. Also in attendance will be Tacos Don Memo and Little Baby's Ice Cream.

"This series seems like a great way to bring people together, activate an underused space in the center of our city and offer a nostalgic summer pastime in the great outdoors," says Pete Angevine of Little Baby's.

Circus

Cirque du Soleil presents 'Totem'

Through Saturday
Camden Waterfront
1 Cooper St., Camden
$40 to $130, 800-450-1480
www.cirquedusoleil.com
This isn't your average circus. "Totem" mixes music, color, comedy, feats of strength and amazing acrobatics, all based around the theme of the evolution of life, from its amphibious state to the aspirations of flight. We're not entirely sure what that means, but we're happy to just sit back and enjoy. The show is wrapping up its Philly run this weekend, so this is your last chance to catch it.

Music

Dave Matthews Band

Susquehanna Bank Center
1 Harbour Blvd, Camden
$53-$89, 856-365-1300
www.ticketmaster.com
Dave Matthews has some of the sweetest pipes in the business. And with their steady saxophone and violin, Dave Matthews Band has been one of the most recognizable sounds on the radio since the '90s. The band comes to the Susquehanna Bank Center for two shows, with opening act Mavis Staples.

'A Little Night Music'

Tonight through Saturday, 7 p.m.
Sunday, 2 p.m.
Arden Theatre
40 N. 2nd Street
$15-$48, 215-922-1122
www.ardentheatre.org
Eight-time Tony Award-winner Stephen Sondheim is one of Broadway's most celebrated composers. With "A Little Night Music," the Arden Theatre goes back in time to his 1973 hit musical, a romantic romp with multiple couples tangled in secrets. Hint: It's the one with famous number "Send in the Clowns."

Festival

Hidden City Festival

Various locations
Day pass $20, weekend pass $40
www.hiddencityphila.org
This festival, scattered all over the city, features inventive art installations and performance pieces in old, abandoned historic sites. Check out Hawthorne Hall at 3849 Lancaster Ave. The Rabid Hands artist collective has transformed the former clubhouse into the Society of Pythagoras.

Theater

'Love, Loss, and What I Wore'

Through July 7
Suzanne Roberts Theatre
480 S. Broad St.
$44-$59, 215-985-0420
www.philadelphiatheatrecompany.org
Based on a collection of funny, poignant, fashion-centric stories from the late humorist Nora Ephron and sister Delia, the women behind "Sleepless in Seattle," "When Harry Met Sally," and "You've Got Mail," this show has become an international hit, with a rotating cast of TV stars stepping onto the stage. Among them is UArts alum Kate Flannery, aka Meredith from "The Office."

Horoscope

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Your insights should not be treated lightly, especially if they could lead to an advantage in your career.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Be an attentive listener, because a colleague is likely to pass on some extremely valuable information. You'll need to read between the lines.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. A fortunate situation could develop with someone who thinks the same way you do. It will be possible through mutual trust.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Your ambitious aims can be achieved if you put your mind to it. It will be important, however, that you think and act big.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. When dealing with others, you can call favorable attention to yourself by being understated.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. You should pay attention to both your intuition and your common sense. Collectively, your reasoning powers will be exceptionally accurate.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20. The secret to dealing successfully with others is to treat everybody as an equal, whether with your boss or underling.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18. When shopping, quality should be given priority over price when it comes to a decision between two items.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. To make the kind of impression you'd like, you should take a little more time than usual to select your attire.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Your sincerity, compassion and warmth will be a light and an example to others. These attributes put you a cut or two above all others.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Make the needs of your loved ones paramount to your own. True joy comes from being a giver.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. An unusual occurrence is likely to give you an advantage over your associates. It could also be something of a financial windfall. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Faith is good for all of us

Re: 'What's faith done for anyone, anyway?' (Metro, June 18) Last week, I read a letter questioning the validity of faith. I am sure this person is not aware of how people with a "faith" have made a positive impact on the world.

For starters, it was a Protestant Christian who invented the printing press. Faith helped the Allied forces stop Hitler during World War II. Because of their faith in God, Quakers and other abolitionists risked their lives. Faith helped Nelson Mandela and Bishop Desmond Tutu push toward an apartheid-free South Africa. And there are numerous others of acclaim whose faith helped them advance humanity, such as George Washington Carver, who was a botanist, chemist, inventor and teacher; and Sir John Boyd Orr, who was a doctor, biologist, founder of the World Academy of Art and Science and the first general-director of the UN Food and Agriculture Organization.

So, despite the fact that we live in a world that has become less tolerant of religion and Christianity in particular, let us remember that not all believers in "faith" are backward simpletons who have made no contributions to the world. PAUL HUNTER, VIA EMAIL

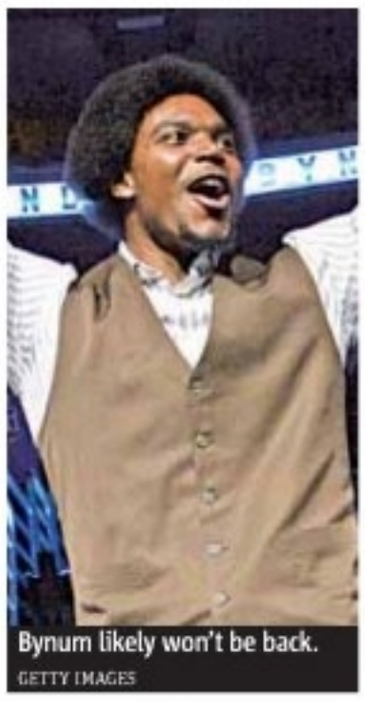
Sixers digging heels in for a big man, not Bynum

NBA. Team looks to the draft for help at center position after failed trade with Lakers didn't work out.

The Sixers are rumored to be looking for a big man with the No. 11 pick in tonight's NBA draft. Names being bandied about are Steven Adams, Cody Zeller and Mason Plumlee.

While front-office members remain holed up in a secret location, there was news regarding the man that was supposed to be the answer in the middle. Andrew Bynum's agent told The Associated Press that the center is done with his rehab and will be ready for training camp. The Sixers haven't contacted him.



Bynum likely won't be back.
GETTY IMAGES

"Philly will do what Philly does. I can't control it," he told The Associated Press. "Next week, I have a feeling I'll be meeting with a couple of teams."

While the Sixers have never flat-out denied bringing Bynum back, new GM Sam Hinkie did say this at his introductory press conference.

"I think of Andrew like the thousands of other young men that are walking around the world that are unrestricted free agents, that have potential to play NBA basketball, and he is one of those," Hinkie said.

Potential picks

Seven possibilities for the Sixers in tonight's NBA draft at pick No. 11:

- Cody Zeller, Indiana, C. Proven low-post scorer and rebounder; would be solid choice.
- Steven Adams, Pittsburgh, C. Raw talent with loads of potential
- Michael Carter-Williams, G, Syracuse. Clutch player when the spotlight is on.

Led Orange to the Final Four

- CJ McCollum, Lehigh, G. Four-year player and terrific shooter
- Mason Plumlee, Duke, C. Can rebound with anyone, would help on the boards for sure. Duke pedigree helps.
- Shane Larkin, Miami, G. Solid all-around point guard who is only going to get better
- Kelly Olynyk, Gonzaga, C. Improved as much as any player in the country

2013 NBA mock draft | by Matt Burke

No. 1

Cavaliers (24-58)

Nerlens Noel, C, Kentucky — The Cavs could very well be bluffing regarding all the trade talk, just to see if they get a "Godfather" offer. Noel would provide the Cavs with much-needed help on the defensive end immediately.

No. 2

Magic (20-62)

Victor Oladipo, SG, Indiana— The Magic are again looking for shooting after trading away JJ Redick. Oladipo is sure to be a better all-around player than Redick, as he is still improving and is a relentless defender.

No. 3

Wizards (29-53)

Otto Porter, SF, Georgetown — Washington was still reportedly shopping the No. 3 pick as of yesterday — but if the Wizards stick here, they'll likely keep Porter in D.C. Porter has a brilliant mid-range game.

No. 4

Bobcats (21-61)

Alex Len, C, Maryland — New Charlotte head coach Steve Clifford and new assistant Patrick Ewing know a thing or two about the center position. Len, at 7-foot-1, has jumped up draft boards to the point where the Cavs are considering him.

No. 5

Suns (25-57)

Ben McLemore, SG, Kansas — McLemore was a stud in his only year at Kansas, and several scouts have labeled him as "a young Ray Allen." High praise for someone who had weak workouts.

No. 6

Pelicans (27-55)

Anthony Bennett, PF, UNLV — Bennett is a beast on the floor and is one of, if not the, best athletes in the 2013 draft. There aren't many holes in the forward's game as he is lethal in the pain and can knock down 3-pointers.

No. 7

Kings (28-54)

Trey Burke, PG, Michigan — Burke was a media darling throughout the 2013 NCAA tournament, and for good reason. The kid will stop at nothing to win and has demonstrated clutch play in the past. His small size could be an issue coming up, however.

No. 8

Pistons (29-53)

C.J. McCollum, G, Lehigh — The Pistons are loaded up front, but are in desperate need of more scoring in the backcourt. The Lehigh product can shoot from NBA range and has a decent NBA guard frame at 6-foot-3, 197 pounds.

No. 9

T'wolves (31-51)

Cody Zeller, PF-C, Indiana — Zeller is as athletic as they come at 7 feet, and he opened some eyes at the draft combine. The passing between Zeller, Kevin Love and Ricky Rubio could be very fun to watch.

No. 10

Blazers (33-49)

Kentavious Caldwell-Pope, SG, Georgia — Nbadraft.net compares Caldwell-Pope to former NBA guard Kerry Kittles, and the Blazers would be fine with that. Someone to compliment Damian Lillard would be nice going forward.

No. 11

Sixers (34-48)

Steven Adams, C, Pittsburgh — Philadelphia is in no mood for a rebuild, but they need to save some face in the front court after the whole Andrew Bynum debacle. Adams is a high-risk, high-reward type.
